Lawrence: 'The hardest job I ever had to do'

"In our old home, we did not have enough room when people walked in, and we were always congested," Mr. Lawrence says. "We had a formal living room and a formal dining room, and everyone seemed to congregate in the family room.

"The idea behind this huge room was to have something central that everyone would use."

The powder room is interesting because even though there aren't any windows, there is natural light coming in through the glass blocks embedded in the wall. A Mexican glass sink carries through the theme of the glass blocks.

The home is 21st century through and through.

The floors, which are either wood or ceramic tile, are heated; it's wired with cameras; and even the stereo speakers are hidden within the pillared surround of the main room.

On either side of the front-door closets, there's what looks like a nook, tucked into the room's hexagonal shape. One side serves as an office, with a fancy desk and bookcases. The other side serves as a formal dining space with a large table and chairs.

Off to the right of this room, through a door, the master bedroom has a fireplace and to-die-for ensuite. The octagonal tray ceiling over the bed has a string of Christmas lights set inside it to light it up.

Ceilings appear to be one of Mr. Lawrence's signatures: Every room in the home has a different ceiling, many of which are soaring.

WAYNE CUDDINGTON, THE OTTAWA CITIZEN

The ceramic tiled master ensuite — big enough to house a grand piano — features a double vanity and large double shower and a monstrous Jacuzzi tub that also fits two.

The large master bedroom has two walk-in closets, but it's the ensuite that is completely stunning. The ceramic tiled room — big enough, at four by four metres, to house a grand piano — features a double vanity and large double shower (there's one head on either end) and a monstrous Jacuzzi tub that also fits two.

"In our travels we'd see things that we liked and we'd say 'That's what we want in the dream home,'" Mrs. Lawrence says.

The kitchen, also off the great room, has cherry stained cabinets, black granite countertops and an island around which parties continue to centre.

The solarium, a room they plan to use year-round, sits next to it and features a small table for four. Pointing outside into the snowy backyard, Mr. Lawrence says: "That's where the pool's going to go."

The second level houses his architectural office and the children's bedrooms, as well as a bathroom shared between the kids and the office.

Brandon's navy blue room has a nautical theme, inspired by Mr. Lawrence's father, who was a ship captain. The room has two large porthole windows.

Amanda has a sunny yellow room with a loft, which the kids climb to watch TV.

The mostly unfinished basement may soon serve as more office space for Mr. Lawrence's firm. For now, it has a finished rumpus room and a guest bedroom.

When they built the house, the Lawrences acted as the general contractors. Mrs. Lawrence's family runs Ray Jan Construction and the company framed the house.

Mr. Lawrence, who concentrates his business on commercial projects, said designing this house was a real challenge.

"This was the hardest job I ever had to do. I was trying to please my clients, who are my wife and two children."
